How the Most Popular Woman in All England Goes From Town

Address The Dr. Sodan periods to fill a print with the second of the wishes of all the world except herself. Her meanness with her money was condemned in my hearing in the houses of nobles and of gentleme, in the shops and in the homes of the poro. The prince is liked rather than loved. He is such a joily spendrift, and yet so full of tact, and yet again so ever ready to attend a public ceremonnal that the people sing is praises. But with the Frincess of Waler (and period) of the world with sexes, living on the same island her. Why this is so over ready to attend the world except herself of the world except herself. Her meanness of the pool of the control of the world exceeded, where all other remedies failed. Not a single case when the directions were followed. It is such a joily spendrift, and yet so full of tact, and yet again so ever ready to attend a public ceremonnal that the people sing is the most reliable and most successful medicine known for colic, cholera and bloody its fafter the doctors had given them was lost in which it was the only medicine used that did cure the worst cases. asked of one of the policemen in charge of the good order of the crowds. "It's the Princess of Wales that's expected, sir," said he. "The royal carriages is more than jew. sir." At the further end of the great vaulted enclosure of iron and glass were to be seen several glossy coupes, on the drivers' seats of which men in black livery sat in pairs—one always with the ribbons in his hands, the other with his arms sat in pairs—one always with the ribbons in his hands, the other with his arms folded, and both with crisp little cockades in their hats. In another five minutes the screech of a locomotive (for locomotives do not whistle in England) sounded near, and was instantly followed by the appearance of the royal train. The locomotive was painted the color of mortar. In front of the botler head, where our engines carry their number plates, were the three ostrich feathers and the motto "Ich Dien" of the Prince of Wale's arm. The device was made of iron and painted. Over each of the two driving wheels was the same significant ornament. Do not fancy that the royal engine was pretty, for nothing is pretty in England that can possibly be made ugly, heavy and awkward. Behind the engine rolled a train of cars of polished mahogany, four coaches, like four great ice boxes out of Third avenue beer saloons. On its side each car bore in gaudy paints the royal arms of Great Britain.

From out of the coaches sprang several men in genteel uniform of block and began depot between the track and the carriage way. In England female royalty may not touch with its kid-covered toes the humble soil of the land, unless a woman of the exalted family tickles her fancy with the seriously juvenile precesses of going out shopping or walking or riding ineog. Otherwise the purple carpet is always lugged along and spread beneath the ladies, and beneath the prince also when he is seriously occupied. On this occasion the royal mother and her daughters, Victoria and Maud, all three in Japan silks and stiff sailor hats of straw, stepped lightly from the carriages. As they the cars and into the carriages. As they were driven between the lines of sightseers they leaned forward and smiled and they leaned forward and smiled and bowed. It is the fashion for royalty to smile and bow in these days. Verily, Uncle Sam's abject teaching is not lost upon those who fatten by divine right, for they know that men are learning that nations and people no longer need depend upon kings for greatness "Can I go forward and see that train?" I asked a policeman.

I asked a policeman.
"I don't think you can, sir," said he.
"Who is your superior officer?"
"There's the inspector, sir. standing alone there in that open space."
"Inspector, I am an American getting my first glimpse of royalty. May I go and look at that train of cars?" American, I see no 'arm," the inspector

The cars were the size and shape of all the English cars—that is, they looked like our oldest style of round topped freight cars with the sides lighted by windows and with a foot rail along each side of each car. But, unlike most English cars, these had large windows such as we see in Pullman day cars, and the ends of e.ch car were of glass, as we never see any car arguer of glass, as we never see any car arguer of glass, as we never see any car arguer of glass, as we never see any car arguer of glass, as we never see any car arguer of glass, as we never see any car arguer of glass, as we never see any car arguer of glass, as we never see any car arguer of glass, as we never see any car arguer of glass, as we never see any car arguer of glass, as we never see any car arguer of glass, as we never see any car arguer of glass, as we never see any car arguer of glass. The other cars were simply royal first-clais coaches—which is to say, coaches divided into three compartments each, there being two seats facing one another in each being two seats facing one another in each through the park. These first-class coaches are much sneered at by Americans, but it is a question, after a whether our own are very much better from either the practical or the luxurious point of view. Last of all came the bag-gage van. When that was emptied a huge blil of baggage, all of canvas, painted Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's black, rese upon the stone landingway be-

The baggage of the royal household was peculiar. For instance, who would have expected to see among the pieces a great case, as big as a Saratoga, labelled "H. R. H. the Prince of Wales—newspapers?" Of course, the moment one stops to think one sees that the prince must read the case what one does not always store to the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on papers, but one does not always stop to think; and then, while one is thinking, the idea flashes to the mind that if he only knew it he could take one American paper, the Sun, and put it in his pocket, with more benefit to himself and man's future; rogress than by carting a ton of English daily letthe very best remedy. Why this is so I never could get ary one to explain, wherefore I strongly suspect that the element of compassion for a lady who bears in smiting silence the behavior of such a husband as the prince must enter largely into the love the people bear her. Be it as it may, it would not be bear her. Be it as it may, it would not be that the princes looks a day older than she did twenty years ago; it would scarcely be safe to say so in humbler circles.

The Value of Hot Water.

"The soothing effects of hot water are not fully appreciated," said a physician the other day. "I recommend it to many of my patients who suffer from insomnia, produced by nervous irritation of the stomach, and also for certain forms of indigestion. Many of them object to it at first, but soon come to like it and are generally much benefited by it." This reminds us that the elegant Pullman sleepers on "The Burlington's" Vestibuled trains between Chicago and St. Paul and Minneapolis, are supplied with hot water from the engine, by a very ingenious device. Do not imagine, however, that this line keeps its patrons in hot water. On the contrary, no
